

Repeated Fractures of Time

An aural and visual programme exploring the fractured yet repetitive nature of life

What we do

Life might seem complex - but still it only consists of fractures of time and matter repeating itself in an endless loop. Our inspirational and educational programme will explore the parallels and differences between aural and visual art and how their arbitrary definition can change content and meaning. Instead of the more common ways in which music and photography are observers of each other, we intimately connect them.

Through slitscan photography, we will present the fractures of time integrated within a single image. Away from the concept of photography as snapshot, harmonies and repetitions through time emerge. The image starts to mirror the musical score, visualising rhythm, tempo and pitch. Connecting photography and music we will go from the elaborate reality to the basics behind, with music for voice, viola and piano by Bridge, Brahms, Ben-Haim, Golijov, Piazzolla, Villa Lobos and others.

Who we are

Gareth Davies (photography) specialises in slitscan panoramic photography, enabling the capture of progress, repetition and time within a single integrated still image.

William Hancox (piano) has performed as a solo pianist, chamber musician and accompanist throughout the UK and abroad.
